

Through techniques such as categorization, entity extraction, sentiment analysis and others, text mining extracts the useful information and knowledge hidden in text content. In the business world, this translates in being able to reveal insights, patterns and trends in even large volumes of unstructured data. In fact, it's this ability to push aside all of the non-relevant material and provide answers that is leading to its rapid adoption, especially in large organizations.